Reusable acoustic blankets reduce chiller noise

Shannon Global Energy Solutions

Instructors at SUNY Oneonta's Human Ecology Building often were distracted by the operation of a nearby chiller. Although elastomeric vibration eliminators can reduce structurally transmitted sound, the chiller's uninsulated compressors continued to disturb instructors and students in class.

After incorporating reusable insulation blankets from Shannon Global Energy Solutions on the chiller's uninsulated compressors, a reduction in noise of 6 dBA was achieved.

"The blankets perform well," says Terry Zimmer, director of Facilities Operations for SUNY Oneonta. "Once Shannon made them and shipped them to us, we installed them ourselves, and they go on and come off easily. The sound is noticeably different since putting the acoustic blankets on."
